Brian,

Can we do 15h?

And not to sound all doom and gloom, just letting you know what's going around. I'll also add that I'm producing a new version that substantially reduces the amount of policy content as well, which should make things easier, too.

Hi,

In the back of your mind as you review the latest draft, please know that folks higher than me are going to be insisting reducing the length of the plan (largely by eliminating more general urban design language) and particularly on making sure that some sort of overall summary map is included that indicates (as arrows, bubbles, etc...) a commitment to some level of detail with respect to where certain uses can/can't go, and a high level indication of how the site will be broadly organized. There are storm clouds ahead, I think, if we can't deliver something like this to internal decision-makers (both staff, but particularly CPC and Council) and the public over the coming weeks.

We'll talk later on in the day – I'm in and out of meetings, but am at the office and available at 403.921.7880 if I'm not at my desk.

Thanks,

-Des
